Sky Faces — A Glimpse II

A short sequence of cloud formations observed during a brief window of shifting skies. The shapes were not noticed in full at the moment of capture, but became visible upon review. Some may see faces or figures. Others will see only clouds. Both can be true.

One formation, seen without the camera, appeared especially large in the sky. These images represent a small selection from that moment.

What do you see?